THE PLAYHOUSE story

The Playhouse Café is part of the Brick District Playhouse charity located in the historic Fulton Theatre. This building was constructed in 1928 for Vaudeville productions and motion pictures. In 1942, the theatre presented Kings Row, the adaptation of the best-selling novel based on Fulton and written by resident Henry Bellamann. The film starred Ronald Reagan, who later titled his autobiography Where is the Rest of Me? based on the movie's most famous line. The Playhouse displays memorabilia from the film including Reagan's suit.

Today, the Brick District Playhouse hosts concerts, plays, lectures, and other special events. All proceeds from the Café go to supporting the performing arts and the continued restoration of this iconic venue in the heart of Fulton Missouri's historic Brick District.
